

Cookie & Tracking Notice

Effective date: July 28, 2026

This notice explains the cookies, local storage, and tracking Get Goods Gratis (the “Service”) uses. It supplements the Privacy Policy. Not legal advice; in the EU/UK, non-essential storage generally requires consent — confirm your consent flow with counsel.

What we store on your device

- Strictly necessary (no consent required): authentication token (keeps you signed in), and local preferences such as your selected language and currency and cached exchange rates and detected country (so the app loads localized without re-fetching). The Service uses in-memory/local storage for these; it does not rely on third-party advertising cookies.
- Functional: UI state and recently viewed items, to make the app usable.
- Analytics / product improvement: in-app behavioral events (clicks, navigation, survey-answer timing) used to improve the Service and detect fraud. You can turn this off in privacy settings (behavioral-recording opt-out); essential functionality continues.

Third-party calls that involve your device

- IP geolocation (to set your country/flag/currency/language) sends your IP to a geolocation provider; the result is cached on your device.
- Exchange rates are fetched from a rates provider (no personal data).
- Outbound retailer links (“find the real thing”): when you tap one you leave the app for a third-party site with its own cookies and policies.

What we do NOT do (in this build)

- No third-party advertising cookies, no cross-app tracking / ad IDs, no selling of personal information.

Your choices

- Behavioral recording: opt out anytime in privacy settings.
- Browser controls: you can clear local storage/cookies in your browser or app settings (doing so signs you out and resets preferences).
- Consent (EU/UK): where required, a consent banner should gather consent for non-essential storage before it is set, and record the choice. Wire your banner to gate the analytics/behavioral capture.
